

Families attending non-CEP schools can still apply for free- or reduced-price lunches.

29 schools will require an application for the free- and reduced-meal program. 120 schools will continue to serve lunch at no cost.

ALL schools will continue to provide breakfast at no cost to all students.

Metro Schools Families,

For the last four years, Metro Nashville Public Schools has participated in the Community Eligibility Provision (CEP), a federal reimbursement program that allows school districts to offer lunch at no cost to students.

MNPS was able to participate because the district's percentage, which is how Tennessee measures poverty in schools, was at 60 percent during the application process four years ago. Since then, our direct certification percentage has dropped to 50 percent.

As a result, MNPS is no longer eligible and cannot offer this program to all students at all schools.

What schools will be affected next year?

- 29 schools will go back to the traditional free- and reduced-meals application system. These schools will require an application for eligible students to receive free- or reduced-price lunches.
- 120 schools will continue to provide lunch at no cost to all students under CEP.
- All schools will serve breakfast at no cost to all students next year.
- Reference the back side of this letter for the full school list.

What does this mean for my student?

- There will be no change for the remainder of this school year. All schools will continue to serve lunch at no cost to students.
- Students who attend a school that will require an application for free- or reduced-price lunch will be able to apply at the beginning of the next school year.

How do I apply for free- and reduced-lunch?

- Eligible families will apply at the start of school if their student is enrolled at a school that will require an application to receive free- or reduced-price lunch.
- More information is available at: <https://www.tn.gov/education/health-and-safety/school-nutrition/free-and-reduced-price-meals.html> .

We know we have children who rely on our nutrition services program as a reliable source for a healthy meal. In the next school year, breakfast will still be provided to all students in all schools and 120 schools will continue to offer lunches at no cost to all students. Students attending the remaining 29 schools will have the option to apply for free- and reduced-price lunch.

Schools that will require an application for eligible students to receive free- or reduced-price lunch for the 2018-19 school year.
